

SOTC Training Schedule Raftingguide 1 (WW III)

Working as a rafting guide involves a lot of different skills, which have to be learnt and then improved in repetitive training. For aspiring guides, this can be both physically and mentally very challenging, especially if the complete training is done in one long course. On top of the training lessons delivered by an instructor, the trainees need to repeat and apply such contents in practical work under the supervision of senior guides, in order to solidify and improve their skill set. That is the reason why we split the guide training into three modules, to deliver contents in portions and to give the aspirants enough time in between to repeat and improve. Added up, the modules comply with the minimum of 10 days of training, that is required by the SOA. The Rescue 3 course is integrated in the basic river rafting course and usually starts after the first two days of rafting.
